- Discussion Breakout rooms: Discussing “Universal Design,” and what “inclusivity” and “anti-ableism” means

(15 min) Conclusion

- Large group final discussion question
- Takeaway document and closing video
- Reflection questions and Q&A

Part One: Disability Inclusion

Discuss: What is a disability?

The Social Model of Disability

TEDx Talk: “Why Everything You Know About Autism is Wrong”

Autistic scholar and researcher Dr. Jac den Houting (they/them) is one of the many disability advocates calling for a “paradigm shift” surrounding the way we view “disability”

We will watch a brief 20 second clip from their TEDx Talk now.

Breakout Rooms

Discussing how the social model of disability shifts some of the ways we understand disability

1. What were your first interactions with “disability”?
 2. In what contexts have you heard/seen the term “disability” used/portrayed in the past and the present?
 3. When and where have you learned about disability history or culture? If you have not been taught this, why do think that is?

What are Access needs?

An access need is something a person needs to communicate, learn, and participate in an activity.

Some examples:

- Glasses or contact lenses
- Soft or dim lighting
- Ramps and elevators
- Closed Captions [CC]

Discuss: What are additional examples of access needs?

(please use the chat or “raise hand” feature!)

A Non-Exhaustive List of Different Access Needs

- Automatic door buttons
- Scent-free events
- ASL interpretation
- Flexible scheduling and timing of events, duration limit
- Assistive technology (text-to-speech or screen-reading software, high- or low-contrast display settings, Braille displays, larger print options)
- Earplugs and noise-cancelling headphones
- Virtual options for classes and office hours
- Sunglasses or FL-41 “rose-tinted” glasses
- Single-stall bathrooms and lighter doors
- Extended time on assignments or exams
- Resource distribution stands at fairs, ticket offices (ex: student/parent welcome info, menstrual products, access cards, voting polls, or face masks) in close proximity to other public buildings, emergency exits, and bus stops (all other RHA and/or A.S enterprise activities)
- Using on-campus transportation services
- Alt Text and visual descriptions
- Dyslexia-friendly typefaces
- Accessible seating options
- “Stim toys” and fidget sensory support items and rooms

Disability Inclusion

When people say “special needs” or “special education,” it may seem like an individual’s needs are “special” or “out of the ordinary”

However, everyone has unique needs, experiences, and ability levels.

access needs are human needs

Note: “accessibility specialist” is an alternative term for “special education teacher,” since it describes the specific knowledge and skill set the teacher might have.

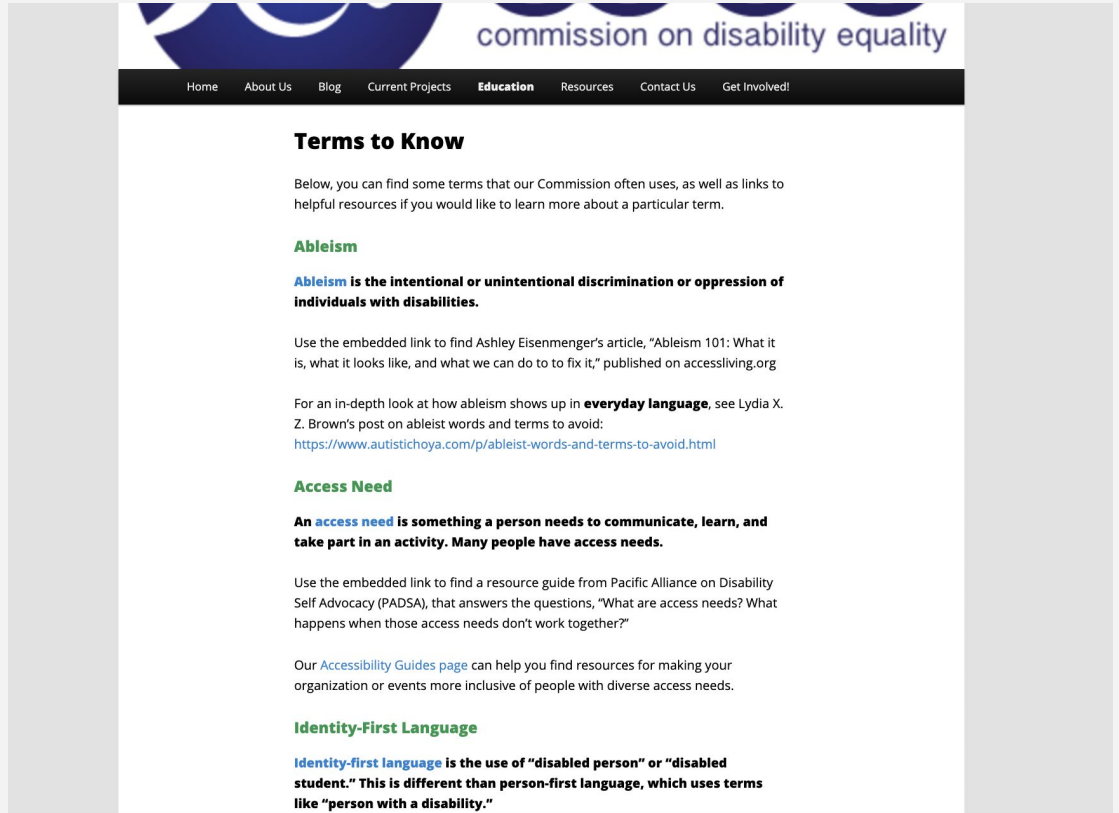

Disability Inclusion and our Campus Community

- For disabled students, we may experience limitations when there aren't supports in place to accommodate for various access needs.
 - Students should not have to disclose their medical history for organizations to proactively prioritize accessibility.
 - Engaging in disability inclusion means making the question, "How can I support you?" part of ongoing conversations
- Access is a process of anti-ableism, not just an outcome.

Our webpage has compiled more educational resources if you would like to learn more!

pictured right: a screenshot of the CODE website's "Terms to Know" page, which can be found under our "Education" tab

The screenshot shows the 'Terms to Know' page on the CODE website. The page header includes the logo for the 'commission on disability equality' and a navigation menu with links for Home, About Us, Blog, Current Projects, Education, Resources, Contact Us, and Get Involved! The main content area is titled 'Terms to Know' and contains the following text:

Below, you can find some terms that our Commission often uses, as well as links to helpful resources if you would like to learn more about a particular term.

Ableism

Ableism is the intentional or unintentional discrimination or oppression of individuals with disabilities.

Use the embedded link to find Ashley Eisenmenger's article, "Ableism 101: What it is, what it looks like, and what we can do to fix it," published on accessliving.org

For an in-depth look at how ableism shows up in everyday language, see Lydia X. Z. Brown's post on ableist words and terms to avoid: <https://www.autistichoya.com/p/ableist-words-and-terms-to-avoid.html>

Access Need

An access need is something a person needs to communicate, learn, and take part in an activity. Many people have access needs.

Use the embedded link to find a resource guide from Pacific Alliance on Disability Self Advocacy (PADSA), that answers the questions, "What are access needs? What happens when those access needs don't work together?"

Our Accessibility Guides page can help you find resources for making your organization or events more inclusive of people with diverse access needs.

Identity-First Language

Identity-first language is the use of "disabled person" or "disabled student." This is different than person-first language, which uses terms like "person with a disability."

10 minute break

Part Two: Disability Justice

10 PRINCIPLES OF DISABILITY JUSTICE

- 1 INTERSECTIONALITY “We do not live single issue lives” --Audre Lorde
Ableism, coupled with white supremacy, supported by capitalism, underscored by heteropatriarchy, has rendered the vast majority of the world “invalid.”
- 2 LEADERSHIP OF THOSE MOST IMPACTED
“We are led by those who most know these systems.” --Aurora Levins Morales
- 3 ANTI-CAPITALIST POLITIC
In an economy that sees land and humans as components of profit, we are anti-capitalist by the nature of having non-conforming body/minds.
- 4 COMMITMENT TO CROSS-MOVEMENT ORGANIZING
Shifting how social justice movements understand disability and contextualize ableism, disability justice lends itself to politics of alliance.
- 5 RECOGNIZING WHOLENESS
People have inherent worth outside of commodity relations and capitalist notions of productivity. Each person is full of history and life experience.
- 6 SUSTAINABILITY
We pace ourselves, individually and collectively, to be sustained long term. Our embodied experiences guide us toward ongoing justice and liberation.
- 7 COMMITMENT TO CROSS-DISABILITY SOLIDARITY
We honor the insights and participation of all of our community members, knowing that isolation undermines collective liberation.
- 8 INTERDEPENDENCE We meet each others’ needs as we build toward liberation, knowing that state solutions inevitably extend into further control over our lives.
- 9 COLLECTIVE ACCESS As brown, black and queer-bodied disabled people we bring flexibility and creative nuance that go beyond able-bodied/minded normativity, to be in community with each other.
- 10 COLLECTIVE LIBERATION No body or mind can be left behind -- only moving together can we accomplish the revolution we require.

“nothing about us without us”
#DisabilityDemandsJustice (released by the Ford Foundation)

A disability justice framework or lens acknowledges that ...

- The disability community is diverse and exists across all identities and backgrounds
 - Ableism affects all communities; it is at the core of our society.
 - All members of the disability community, but especially disabled people of color, are marginalized and are vulnerable to ableist discrimination, economic instability, prejudice, and violence.
- To dismantle systems of oppression and difference, such as racism or sexism, disabled people's voices must be included in the conversation.

Discuss: How can we use a disability justice framework to analyze different social issues and current events?

Breakout rooms

Discussing “Universal Design,” and what “inclusivity” and “anti-ableism” means

What would a world
with universal access look like?

Final discussion question:

How has your perspective on disability changed after this workshop?

CODE's 3-Pillar

Vision:

1. enhance the emotional and mental well-being of students in the disability community
2. ensure the academic success of disabled students
3. empower students to develop meaningful social relationships with peers

Who are we?

We are a student-run A.S. group dedicated to disability_justice.

We are committed to establishing a platform for self-advocacy and community-building efforts, run by and for students in the disability community.

As we work to make UCSB a more accessible and inclusive campus for everyone, our Commission invites collaboration with other marginalized communities. Many of us experience ableism at the intersection of other interlocking oppressions. It is critical to recognize that in our efforts empower fellow students in the disability community.

1. How can you work to end ableism (in the immediate present and in the future?)
2. How might disability justice apply to your life?
3. What are ways that your campus entity could collaborate with CODE in the future and how does a disability justice lens help you better your _____ on-the-ground work? :)

Overview

- “What is disability, how is it apparent in your own life?”
 - Definitions/Inclusive language: ableism; invisible disabilities; neurodiversity.
 - Striving for a universal access mindset.
- “What is an access barrier?”
 - “Access barriers” are obstacles that make our campus inaccessible.
- “How does accessibility play a role in other resistance movements?” “Why does this matter?”
 - We should recognize the lack of emotional/communal support and awareness, and we should acknowledge how ableism intersects with other systems of oppression and stigma.
 - All members of the disability community, especially disabled people of color, experience discrimination, economic/environmental challenges, violence, and prejudice.
- Breakout room: What would a world with “universal access/design” look like?
 - We would like others to understand the challenges that students in the disability community face. We need support networks and more accommodations.
 - Discuss: allyship, ability inclusion in strategic planning, and the importance of listening and responding
